CHC earns Accreditation with Distinction from ANCC

Commonwealth Health Corporation (CHC) has achieved Accreditation with Distinction by the American Nurses Credentialing Center (ANCC), a subsidiary of the American Nurses Association. This highest recognition awarded by the ANCC Accreditation Program is granted to CHC for four years, February 2013 through March 2017.

ANCC Accreditation distinguishes organizations that demonstrate quality and excellence in the curriculum design and delivery of continuing nursing education (CNE). Accredited organizations, like CHC, meet comprehensive, evidence-based criteria to ensure CNE activities are effectively planned, implemented and evaluated.

Only organizations that demonstrate zero deficiencies requiring a progress report achieve Accreditation with Distinction. As of September 2012, less than 10% of all ANCC-accredited organizations achieve this honor.

CHC's Education and Development Department plans and implements continuing education programs for CHC's own clinical staff as well as healthcare professionals throughout the region. Expanding and enhancing educational opportunities is a goal of the department.

"More and more of our nursing staff are becoming nationally certified in their practice specialty," said Vivian McClellan, Corporate Director of Education and Development. "Being able to provide continuing education that meets these national standards support our nursing staff who are certified to maintain their credentials." CHC is one of only six organizations in Kentucky that offer ANCC-accredited nursing continuing education.

Commonwealth Health Corporation's mission is to care for people and improve the quality of life in the communities we serve.

Community health needs assessments address key healthcare needs

Community Health Needs Assessments for Commonwealth Health Corporation's four hospitals are now available. Hospitals are required to complete an assessment to comply with the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act of 2010 and to maintain their tax exempt status. But there are many other objectives:

- To help meet the hospital's mission to care for people and improve the quality of life in the communities we serve;
- To establish community health needs for the hospital's service area, to determine areas of greatest need, and for the hospital to develop a strategic plan to address those needs;
- To involve internal and external resources to ensure needs of individuals are met and that efforts are not duplicated; and
- To create a sustainable process for conducting a community health needs assessment that can be continued for future assessments.

In September 2011, CHC's four hospitals joined with the Barren River District Health Department and numerous other healthcare providers, community organizations and leaders to form the Barren River Community Health Planning Council. The Council planned and implemented a community health needs survey and assessment process. Key healthcare needs for the community were identified. Strategic plans were developed to meet those needs — addressing the strengthening of partnerships with community health providers and organizations, preventive care and disease management, and access to care.

Chefs create dazzling cuisine at The Medical Center

Jason Lohmeier

Larry Little

Tim O'Nan

Whether you are a “foodie” or just like good food, you should know all three locations of The Medical Center have extraordinary chefs serving up exquisite concoctions of culinary creations.

In the past, “hospital food” was in the same category as “airplane food,” when airlines still served food. The Executive Chefs at all three Medical Center campuses are changing that perception. Working with Morrison Healthcare Foodservice, they are serving up some of the best food in the area. All three chefs bring years of cooking experience, and a love of food to the communities they serve.

With the recent addition of two of the chefs, one at The Medical Center at Scottsville, and the other at The Medical Center at Franklin, it is the perfect time to introduce them, and learn more about these talented men who have brought their love of cooking to the healthcare industry and our communities.

Jason Lohmeier is the Executive Chef at The Medical Center at Bowling Green. He has been with Morrison for ten years, serving as an Executive Chef for the past eight years. He has a spicy flare, and loves to cook and eat Cajun and Southwestern cuisine. He has been with Commonwealth Health Corporation for almost four years. Chef Lohmeier just recently celebrated the birth of his daughter. He lives in Pleasant View, Tennessee with his wife Callie, son Jayden and new baby daughter McKendrie.

From serving two Presidents and a General, Executive Chef Larry Little is now serving up exquisite food at The Medical Center at Scottsville. During his military career, Chef Little had the honor of serving Presidents Jimmy Carter and George Bush, as well as Vice President Dick Cheney and General Colin Powell. He has been a certified chef since 1980, and has received numerous honors and awards. Chef Little says, “It is my objective to take my management and culinary skills to the next level and beyond.” He is now working on those goals, and sharing his many years of culinary experience with his team at The Medical Center at Scottsville. Chef Little and his team are continuing to improve the food service and quality in the healthcare environment with delicious and nutritious meals cooked with fresh, local ingredients.

The Medical Center at Franklin has recently hired Executive Chef Tim O'Nan to lead its culinary team. Chef O'Nan has a love of food and wellness. He started cooking at the age of 15 in his hometown of Adaton, Mississippi. His first love of food and cooking came from watching Chef Justin Wilson on public television. He graduated from the Pennsylvania Institute of Culinary Arts. Chef O'Nan worked in a number of restaurants, including the Ritz-Carlton in Naples, Florida honing his culinary skills. Other than the joy of cooking, Chef O'Nan enjoys staying in good physical shape by playing a variety of sports and participating in races. He is married to Johanna, and has three children, Aidan 9, Lilly 3 and 6 month old Tristan. His words to all of us are, “go cook something !”

Call to all CHC employees

The Medical Center Chest Pain Committee is challenging all CHC employees to be prepared to care for their loved ones and their work team when it comes to chest pain. And it starts with keeping one simple thing on hand that can substantially improve your chance of survival from a heart attack — aspirin.

Heart attacks occur when the blood supply to your heart is blocked. Oftentimes this can result from plaque in an artery that causes a blood clot to form, thus blocking blood flow to the heart. Aspirin helps thin the blood and decreases clotting.

In 2012, Medical Center EMS estimated that less than 50 percent of households who called 911 with heart attack symptoms had aspirin on hand. EMS recommends that individuals keep 325 mg noncoated aspirin, which is either one adult or four children's aspirin (81 mg), on hand in an easily accessible location.

What you can do:

1. Make sure you have aspirin available in your home and workplace and that everyone knows where it is located in case you or one of your family members develops chest pain. ONLY give aspirin to chew on the advice of Emergency Medical Dispatch. There may be contraindications for aspirin such as allergies. Chewing the aspirin (even if it is enteric coated) will speed absorption to the blood stream.
2. Encourage your friends and family to have aspirin available in their households.
3. Encourage community places that you frequent such as your church to keep a bottle of aspirin on hand.
4. Make sure everyone (family AND employees) knows that if someone has chest pain to call 911 immediately.
5. Reminder, if you are on the campuses of our hospitals, activate your Rapid Response Team. You should have posters in your department reminding you how to get help in an Emergency.
